

A PHOTOGRAPHIC TRIBUTE TO THE GEOLOGIC MAPPING OF BILL BROSGÉ' IN NORTHERN ALASKA

Bill taking notes at a station in the Wiseman quadrangle, 1981. Photo by T.E. Moore.

Long-time colleague Hill Reiser (left) and Bill Brosgé discussing map relations in the Arctic quadrangle, 1979. Photo by T.E. Moore.

Map of Alaska showing locations of 1:250,000-scale quadrangles. Quadrangles mapped by Bill Brosgé are shown in yellow.

Bill viewing the sub-Mississippian unconformity, Demarcation Point quadrangle, 1969. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Bill at spike camp on the Hulahlula River, 1970. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Field work by boat on Galbraith Lake, 1950. Galbraith Lake lies along the Trans-Alaska Pipeline and Dalton Highway which were built about 20 years after this photo was taken.

Bill at the tiller on field expedition along the Porcupine River, 1964. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Bill waiting for an airplane during camp move, Echooka River, 1950. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Mapping the Philip Smith quadrangle, 1976. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Tom Dutro (standing) and Bill crossing the Porcupine River, 1964. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Bill taking notes in a warm helicopter bubble on a cold day in the Wiseman quadrangle in 1981. Helicopter pilot Cy Asta reading book at left. Photo by T.E. Moore.

Bill in the NARL cabin at Lake Peters, 1969. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Bill discussing the day's field plans in the Wiseman quadrangle, with John Dillon (left) and Dave Adams (right) of the Alaska Div. Geol. & Geophys. Surveys. Dillon died in a plane crash in the Brooks Range in 1987. Photo by T.E. Moore.

Expedition that traversed the Brooks Range in 1951. From left to right: Bill, Gordon Herreid, Jack Warne, Dick Olsen, Red Grady, Marv Mangus, and Bill Patton. The party climbed Brooks Range from north using weasels (the tracked vehicles in background) and descended southward on the John River by boat. This party was only the 5th government expedition to cross the central Brooks Range. Photo taken on upper John River (Wiseman quadrangle) after completion of the Weasel segment. Photo by George Gryc.

Bill and Tom Dutro in spike camp in the Demarcation Point quadrangle, 1970. They subsisted on, as well as sat on, C-rations for the duration of the camp. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Bill doing evening map compilation at Crevice Creek Ranch, Wiseman quadrangle, 1981. Photo by T.E. Moore.

Bill celebrating the end of a long field season at Takahula Lake, Survey Pass quadrangle in 1962. Sign says "Harry's Pier-- Fish, Buffalo Chips Served" Photo by Hill Reiser.

Camping on the Sheenjek River during the late summer, 1952. Left to right, Dick Olsen, Marv Mangus, Bill Brosgé, Tom Dutro. Photo by Hill Reiser.

A meeting at the international boundary in 1980. Left to right: Don Norris (Geological Survey of Canada), Cy Asta (pilot), Bill, and Hill Reiser. Hill Reiser photo.

Bill and Tom Dutro discussing the stratigraphy of the Wiseman quadrangle in 1981. Photo by T.E. Moore

Bill and field crew at Nigu Lake at the end of the 1950 field season. From left to right: Steve Dwornik, Hill Reiser, Bill, John Downs, Bill Nystrom, Bernie Armbruster, Clair Gudim. Hill Reiser photo.

U.S.G.S. geologists at Umiat, 1951. From left to right: Bill Patton, Marv Mangus, Gordon Herreid, and Bill Brosgé. Photo by Hill Reiser.

Hill Reiser (left) and Bill reviewing the rocks captured in the Brooks Range and brought back to the office, 1985. Photo by E.R. White.